

The evidence that I have chosen to demonstrate my knowledge of standard four is my introduction letter that I had sent home during my first week of practicum. Within this practicum I was also able to communicate with parents through a student generated newsletter as well as messages within student's planners. I also had the opportunity to chat with parents before and after school. Through creating and experiencing this I was able to learn the importance of involving the parents within the students learning. Through connecting with parents I was able to gain valuable knowledge about the students that I may not of been able to otherwise. Communicating with parents is something that I see as being very important and key to the success of students because parents are the ones who knows their child the best. Without communication with parents, valuable information regarding the child and their learning can be missed. In order to successfully support and teach our students, I believe it is key to be aware of the big picture and be in contact with all those involved in the student's life.
